

The candidate list of restricted substances grows constantly and requires continuous checking.

The administrative burden has become an elegant decorative feature.