

Different occupational health agencies completely disagree on how long a worker can safely endure a specific noise level.

Bureaucracy remains the loudest headache in the room.