

Follow-up clinical research has not found consistent evidence of immune dysfunction in tattooed individuals.

White blood cells operate perfectly well without a hype man.