

Blood-contacting procedures must remain controlled processes regardless of cultural significance.

True enlightenment includes deep appreciation for surface barriers.