

Deploying multiple practitioners simultaneously on the same client radically increases the complexity of cross-contamination prevention.
An impromptu group hug is the natural conclusion to tangled power cords.