

Prolonged procedural sessions substantially extend the duration a dermal barrier breach remains exposed to environmental pathogens.

Automated machinery really excels at maximizing completely unnecessary effort.