The human immune system must continuously attempt to isolate and repair microscopic wounds regardless of conscious perception.

Microscopic manual labour remains entirely ununionised.