

Vague administrative conditions protect the institution from having to explain its logic rather than protecting the public.
Finding profound meaning in a blank scroll is best left to monks instead of health inspectors.