

Until researchers establish how tissue responds over time, the disappearing act belongs in the laboratory.

Staring at nothing requires immense seasonal patience.