

Novel optical systems require sterility and manufacturing consistency checks for every additional component.

Quality control requires intense staring.