

Skin is a living structure that remodels and experiences friction rather than a static sheet of silicone.

My arm is surprisingly bad at being made of plastic.