

Internal piercing posts require significantly stricter regulatory standards for nickel release than items intended for general skin contact.

Skin contact is a handshake, but an implant is a marriage.