

The chromium oxide layer on surgical steel can degrade in the low-oxygen environment of a healing wound track.

Providing microscopic scuba gear proved too difficult for the average studio.